Why Me

I want to describe why I am a great fit for Alphabet.

I routinely perform rapid improvement events (RIE) on myself so that I am continuously finding ways to add more value to everything that I have the opportunity to embrace. Over the past year I have adopted an agile lifestyle where I group the tasks of my personal life, business, and day job into short phases of work (sprints) and at the end of each phase reassess the methods, priority, time management, and other aspects that contribute to overall productivity and quality. This has eliminated unnecessary work and pruned my environment for continuous learning and improvement where I utilize my top five strengths (strategic, focus, futuristic, command, competition) to be a leader not only of my life, but also of every team that I impact.

What I did not know about myself while growing up was that I had already been exercising the above management skills when I mastered the violin at an early age. Since then my passions have evolved to encompass different aspects of science – particularly technology.

Attached is my resume. However, what it will not tell you is how I benefit from an agile style of living. It will not tell you that I have been able to start my masters degree while still finishing up my bachelors. It does not relay that besides contributing to a corporate environment and getting an education, I am also an entrepreneur. It leaves out that I do not believe that classroom learning is enough and therefore I spend my free time reading research papers and taking additional, independent courses through avenues such as pluralsight.com. It is these things that I take the opportunity to relay in this letter.

When I take time to reflect on what I have been able to accomplish thus far in my young life, it excites me because I know how much of an influence I will be able to make in the fields of technology.

Why Alphabet

I have long held the idea that one should devise the challenges they want to accomplish in their life and then find a company that they are passionate about, can work on those challenges with, and that will mold them into a better person. That company for me is Alphabet. Check out my website at frankgrecojr.com to explore more about the challenges that I hope to accomplish in my lifetime.
